

MORNING APPEAL.

FRIDAY.....OCTOBER 26, 1877

SOME REPUBLICAN FIRMNESS.

Not all the old time firmness of the Republican party has evaporated. Something of the ancient resistance to injustice and wrong still remains in the Senate and is manifest. Though betrayed by the President who was elected by their votes, the white and the black Republicans of the South are not to be wholly deserted, the Republican power in the Senate is to intervene between the Southern Republicans and the adherents of the Lost Cause. If what appears below be true, we have a party yet. Loyalty to those who have the right of its alliance, and not loyalty to a false President, is the inspiration now manifest in the Upper House of Congress. The MORNING APPEAL congratulates its Republican reader upon the indications made apparent by the following statement. Under date of Washington, October 24th, we are informed that it is apparent that many of the President's nominations are not received with great cordiality by the Senate, and there is a growing doubt of the confirmation of many of the most important of them. This is especially the case with those that have been referred to the judiciary committee, whose members are generally opposed or indifferent to the President. Every nomination of a Democrat will, it is safe to say, be sent back to him. The members say in defense of their refusal to confirm them, that the Southern negroes and Republicans have lost every means of defense and protection except the federal courts and they intend to insist that the officers of these courts be men whose loyalty to the cause of human freedom cannot be questioned. Members of the cabinet say the reason the President did not advise with the members of the Senate on appointments was that the Senators were absent, and that the President will not be disappointed if some of his nominations were rejected for that cause.

FINAL DISPOSITION OF THE SIOUX.

General Crook has given the following statement of the arrangements for the removal of the Sioux, for publication under date of Cheyenne, Oct. 24: Captain Wessells, with two companies of the Third Cavalry and all the Indians of Red Cloud agency, will leave on Thursday for a place on White river, in Dakota, about forty miles from the Missouri river. Captain Lawson, with two companies of the same regiment and the Indians at Spotted Tail agency, will leave there on the same day for the Ponca reservation, in the northern part of Nebraska, at the mouth of the Niobrara river, where they will remain until spring. The Arapahoes, who are to move to the vicinity of the Shoshone reservation, are expected to start the same day. General Crook anticipates no trouble whatever. The general says with regard to the abandonment of the frontier posts, that Camp Robinson and Sheridan are the only posts to be abandoned this fall. He thinks that troops will be retained at most of the posts on the Union Pacific railroad—Fort Laramie, Fetterman, McKinney and camps Brown and Stambaugh—for many years.

EXPLANATORY.—In as-much as there have been some hints in late issues of the MORNING APPEAL of an impaired condition of the Editor's eye-sight, it is not improper to state implicitly the facts of the case: He is suffering from ulceration of the cornea of the right eye, and by the nature of his disease, and in obedience to the injunctions of his physician, he can neither read nor write, and is consequently unable to attend to his professional duties. He is getting better, and expects to return to his work in a few days.

Says the Reveille: The Sazerac Saloon—famous in the land as the cradle, the nursery and the headquarters of the Sazerac Lying club, is being overhauled preparatory to a thorough repairing, a complete painting and general fixing up. At present it looks like some banquet hall deserted, but when the carpenters and painters are through with it, it will be one of the neatest and cosiest dispensaries of liquid refreshments in Austin. While the repairs to the saloon are in progress the meetings of the Club will be held in the Pest House at Clifton.

Fifty samples of wall paper recently examined in London were found to contain arsenic either as arsenite or aceto-arsenite of copper. Some papers with green figures were found to be free from arsenic, while, as a rule, the higher priced qualities contained the poison in the largest quantities. A room of the moderate dimensions of sixteen feet square and nine feet high would be covered, if these papers were used, with "ornamental" surfaces containing from fifty-two grains to more than eight ounces of poisonous matter.

Says the Sun:—At Christmas the Hayes circus is going all the way down the Atlantic seaboard and all the way up the Mississippi; but the champion vagrant has concluded to put in a little trip between now and the holidays by taking the circus to Richmond during the Virginia fair. Christmas would have been too long to wait.

San Francisco, October 24.—The French gunboat Segond, from Tahiti, brings the news of the death of Queen Pomare of the Society Islands, September 17, of heart disease. Her oldest son, Ariane, has been proclaimed king.

SOUND TALK FROM BROTHER CASSIDY.

In the Eureka Sentinel of October 24th we find the following sound and timely comments upon President Hayes and a prominent feature of his policy. Mr. Cassidy's conclusions are manly and greatly to his credit: "Mr. Hayes has been variously estimated by both Republicans and Democrats. One class of persons of both parties admit that he is not burdened with brains, but claim for him extraordinary goodness of heart and honesty of purpose. While others, belonging also to both parties, are unwilling to accord to him either brains or honesty. The general impression seems to be that Mr. Hayes possesses some very remarkable characteristics, but just what they are no two persons appear to agree, nor can any one clearly define his own ideas of the acting President's greatness. There is one thing, however, about which all must agree, that thus far his administration has been characterized by one measure wholly original. We refer to the order forbidding all persons who hold office under the National Government to take any part in public or political affairs. This idea of depriving persons of the highest and most sacred duty of citizenship, because he happens to hold an office, is not only original but is the boldest advance in the direction of usurpation and centralization that has yet been made. It can be explained in no other way except to admit that it is the weakest blunder in the silly and desperate effort of a weak-minded demagogue to gain popular favor by a blow at office holders. A more flagrant violation of the provisions of the Constitution and the spirit of American institutions has never been attempted at any time since our political organization, yet we occasionally hear Democrats applaud this most damnable act of the Executive, because it happens to strike at Republicans alone. Democrats should be able to rise so far above party as to be able at all times to applaud and support what is right, because right, and to condemn and denounce what is wrong, because wrong, without regard to party lines or differences."

The Transcript, Nevada, Cal., contains the following account of a terrible accident:—We learn that a little son of Mr. Taylor, who resides one mile below Rough and Ready, met with a terrible death yesterday morning under the following circumstances. It appears Mr. Taylor was hauling wood to the town, when his son a little over four years of age, ran out and wanted to ride. Mr. Taylor put his boy up on the seat of the wagon, while he walked, driving the horses. He had not proceeded but a few hundred yards when he looked around to see how the boy was getting along. He saw nothing of him and he stopped his team and went back, and to his horror found the boy dead in the road. He had fallen off the wagon, and the wheels had passed over his head in a most shocking manner.

A book recently published by the Marquis de Segur a zealous Roman Catholic, relates that in Rome, when the Pope was seriously ill, Mlle. Leautaud, a philanthropic lady of Marseilles, resolved to offer up her life in his place, and fearful of presumption, sought his permission to do so. The Pope, after long silence, placed his hand on her head and said, "Go, my daughter, and do what the Spirit of God has suggested to you." Next day, on receiving the consecrated wafer, she fervently expressed her desire, was immediately seized with a sharp pain, and died three days afterward. The Pope, on learning her death, exclaimed, "So soon accepted?" and M. de Segur believes that this accounts for his prolonged life.

THE LYON COUNTY TIMES gives this interesting account of the taming of a wild cat: Dr. Blackwood brought with him on his return a well-grown wild cat, now four or five months old, that is perfectly tamed and may be handled with entire safety. This is the only instance within our knowledge where a wild cat has been so completely domesticated, and perhaps the success in this case is partly owing to unusual good temper on the part of the animal. This is one of a litter of three found in Utah by the Doctor when quite young. He was proceeding to kill them, but the apparent good nature of this one caused him to spare its life and adopt it as a pet.

The Reveille defines perfect Aborigine happiness in the following manner: "A picture of happiness, supreme and complete, is an Indian lad with two hats on his head, a man's boot on one foot, a woman's gaiter on the other and a flag of truce fluttering in the wind from a breach in his rear entrenchments, as he skips along trying to fly a white boy's discarded kite, and both ignorant and unmindful of the philosophy of the tail of the kite."

The Madras famine has left thousands of children orphans. Most of these will probably come under State care until they grow up, and it was at first taken for granted that they would be educated as Christians, but it has been strongly urged at a public meeting that this would not be right, on the ground that no interference is justifiable with the religion of a child as derived from its deceased parents.

The Woodruff scientific expedition around the world will not start from New York before next spring. The vessel intended for the voyage was found to be unfit, and a new steamer has been ordered.

ANOTHER BLOODY AFFRAY AT TUSCARORA.

The Elko Independent of the 23rd inst. contains the particulars of a most shocking shooting encounter which took place near Tuscarora a few days since. We quote as follows: "Redell called Mille out of his tent and said he was going to settle an old grudge between them, the former being under the influence of liquor. A desperate fight ensued continuing until both were exhausted, Redell returning to his tent. Shortly after, however, he came back armed with a revolver, and again called Mille out to finish the fight. The latter also had a revolver but it contained only one load, and taking the weapon stepped forth, when Redell fired, the ball striking Mille in the abdomen and passing clear through his body. Mille returned the fire but missed his aim, when a hand to hand combat between them ensued, Mille getting his antagonist's pistol and firing over his shoulder at Redell, who was at his back and holding him around the waist. After another struggle, both fell to the ground, and Mille dropped the pistol, but freeing himself, he sprang to his feet, seized an ax, and with it dashed out Redell's brains. Mille is suffering intense pain from his wound, which it is thought must prove fatal—in fact he is supposed to have deceased 'ere this time'."

A Roman Catholic lady well known in London society, when she goes to confession at the Jesuits' Church in Farm street, arrays herself in sad and mortified garments which, at the first glance, conceal her rank. Among her weeds, however, she carries for her comfort a bottle of eau de cologne, and the bottle slipped from her hand the other day as she knelt at the confessional awaiting her turn to enter. The padre within, who has many penitents of another class and other habits, hearing the crash and mistaking the cause, started up with the stage whisper, "You awful old woman, you're at it again!"

Augustus G. Bartlet, who is white, brought suit in Chicago for divorce from his wife, who is black. They had been married two years, and had lived together peaceably; but he had gradually grown tired of the notoriety that the contrast in color gave them. His accusations against her, however, were found to be groundless, and the case was decided against him.

Thiers kept a personal diary from 1831 to the time of his death, and it is rumored that the portion relating to the history of his Presidency is written in detail and with continuity.
